Now when the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that the children of the captivity builded the temple unto the LORD God of Israel' then they came to Zerubbabel, and to the chief of the fathers, and said unto them, Let us build with you: For we seek your God as ye do; and we sacrifice unto him since the days of Esar-Haddon, king of Assur which brought us up hither.. But Zerubbabel and Jeshua, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, Ye have nothing to do with us to build an house unto the LORD our God; but we ourselves together will build unto th LORD God of Israel, as King Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us.

Frances Havergal wrote many hymns in her life. She said she got most of her inspiration from small moments – defining moments. She said one of the strongest things she had ever seen was a painting of Jesus, wearing a crown of thorns with blood dripping down from the wounds. The caption of that painting was; ‘This, I have done for thee - - what hast thou done for me?’
When she got home, she wrote a poem about what that painting meant to her, but was so emotional when she read it as she walked by the fireplace, she threw the poem in, but it flew out and landed on the floor without her seeing it. Her father picked it up, read it, and encouraged her to put music to it. She did, and the result was the hymn, “Take My Life, and Let It Be.”
